The Early Head Start teacher for grant 02HP0020 had a high school diploma. Each staff person had a professional development plan; however, none indicated staff was enrolled in coursework to obtain the required qualifications. The grantee did not ensure all Head Start and Early Head Start (EHS) center-based teachers had the minimum education qualifications and competency requirements; therefore, it was not in compliance with the regulation. Desk/FTL Solo (2/6/2019) - Corrected The grantee ensured all Head Start and Early Head Start (EHS) center-based teachers had the minimum education qualifications and competency requirements. The grantee partnered with local post-secondary institutions to enroll teachers in degree programs, secured a waiver for 33 teachers, strengthened monitoring and staff placement procedures, and provided training to new staff about qualifications. The grantee partnered with local post-secondary institutions. In an interview, the Education Manager stated the grantee developed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with Erie Community College. The college initiated cohorts that provided classes on site and provided tutoring support. A new cohort was scheduled to begin every 3 months. The grantee paid for books and tuition for the teachers. Currently, 26 teachers were enrolled in cohorts. The Director added the grantee also had a cohort with Buffalo State College. Six Head Start teachers were enrolled and would be graduating with bachelor degrees in the summer. A review of documents found the grantee had current MOUs with Erie Community College and Buffalo State College to provide staff with credentialing programs. A review of a list of 32 teachers found all were enrolled in degree programs. The Director stated one teacher was still awaiting approval from the post-secondary institution,	Corrected and one teacher's name was duplicated on the waiver and the approval, making the actual number of waivers applied for and approved 33, not 34.

The grantee strengthened monitoring of staff qualifications and tightened staff placement procedures. The Director stated Head Start was tracking staff qualifications; however, there were gaps in the system. The grantee's Human Resources (HR) took over tracking staff qualifications. Each month, HR staff met with the Education Manager to discuss teacher qualifications and progress on plans of study. Education Specialists followed up with staff to ensure they stayed on track to secure credentials. Education Service Area Reports were completed monthly and provided to the Education Manager.

The HR Manager stated that only candidates with required credentials were hired as lead teachers. Candidates without the required qualifications were recommended to Head Start as classroom assistants and enrolled in a Child Development Associates (CDA) program. HR used the Employment Qualification Worksheet to determine an applicant's qualifications for an interview and hire. HR also tracked the staff's progress on the CDA and notified Head Start when staff completed the program. At that point, they became eligible to be teachers. Teachers with a CDA were enrolled in a degree program, and HR tracked enrollment and progress. A review of September, October, and December 2018 Education Service Area Reports found they included the credentials held by each teacher. A review of a list of teachers with a CDA found each teacher was enrolled in a degree program. In addition, a review of the grantee's Qualifications Score Sheet found it monitored teacher candidate qualifications.

The grantee secured a waiver for 33 Head Start staff--one name was duplicated. The Director stated after the review they conducted an audit of staff credentials. The audit determined that more than seven staff did not meet education requirements. Staff that did not qualify were enrolled in credentialing and degree programs. A review of documents found the grantee applied for a waiver dated January 14, 2019, and it was approved by the Regional Office on February 5, 2019. Comparison of the list of teachers approved for a waiver with the list of teachers currently enrolled in degree programs found 33 of 34 teachers were enrolled in degree programs and 1 teacher was waiting for approval of her application to a degree program.

The grantee provided teacher qualifications training for new staff. The Director stated training for new staff was provided during a week-long new hire orientation with the Education Manager. In addition, the Education Manager provided training during the Education Orientation. A review of the Multi-Day Syllabus Template found it contained information about the CDA degree program completion requirements. Also, the Head Start Orientation-New Staff checklist included information about credentialing.

The grantee ensured all Head Start and EHS center-based teachers had the minimum education qualifications and competency requirements. This area of noncompliance is corrected.
